Human Capital Consulting Partners to Deliver HR Advisory Services to Fraunhofer USA's Center for Molecular Biotechnology

Philadelphia, PA, January 28, 2008—Human Capital Consulting Partners today announced a new human capital consulting client, Fraunhofer USA's - Center for Molecular Biotechnology \(CMB\) a nonprofit research and development organization that develops and applies plant science and other core platform technologies for the production of valuable proteins including those used to develop vaccines against bioterrorism agents. Human Capital Consulting Partners will assist CMB with its day-to-day human resources processes and programs, including executive coaching, teambuilding, performance management and objective setting, training and development strategies for supervisors and managers, and compensation.

"Today's typical biopharmaceutical organization is on the fast track, often leaving little time to develop the processes and programs to support the increasing importance that human capital plays in their long-term growth and success," said Jim Geier, President and Founder of Human Capital Consulting Partners. "Human Capital Consulting Partners provides the missing element of experience and insight to help organizations like the Center for Molecular Biotechnology develop human capital strategies and programs that best serve their strategic vision and that better serve their employees and stakeholders."
